Coaches/Professionals Overview

In today's ever growing technological world, new trends and programs are developed to improve our lives. With this constant surge of new information and programs available, communication and the world is a click or text away. But with all these new advances, come new dangers and concerns. Coaches/Professionals who work with children need to be aware of the technology the children are using and the trouble that can follow if safety rules are not in place.

Topics covered will be:

> Today's current apps and programs
> Cyber bullying/Sexting
> Social Networking, positives and negatives
> How to protect kids from becoming victims
> How we create "digital footprints"
> Safety tips for coaches/professionals on how > to protect themselves online

My style is to not lecture but present the facts. Based on what I've seen firsthand as a police officer, during my undercover investigations as a child online, as a parent, as a resource for schools and as someone who works with college scholarship committees and employers on background checks, I have seen both the positive and negative results of being online and that is what I relay to the students. What we do online right now can have an impact on our future.

Be Safe,

Scott Driscoll
